Returning starters Nathaniel Adibi (83), Ronyell Whitaker (2) and Willie Pile (35) will be key figures as Virginia Tech’s fast, young defensive unit tries to uphold the Hokies’ reputation for defensive excellence.

Riding the wave of nine consecutive bowl games and a BIG EAST Conference-leading 83 wins over the last nine seasons, the Virginia Tech football team is entering what head coach Frank Beamer calls a critical year for the program.

The Hokies will open 2002 preseason practice with several issues that still need attention. There are questions surrounding the Hokies’ quarterback position, the middle of the Tech defense and the wide receiver positions. There are also continuing adjustments being made to a new offensive coordinator and a new quarterbacks coach.

With perhaps the toughest football schedule in school history ahead of them, it all adds up to a challenging season for the coaching staff and the team.

“Overall, I think this is a critical year for the program,” Beamer says. “Not only do we have to replace 11 players who are now in NFL camps, we are also getting ready to play probably the toughest schedule we’ve ever played here. When you put those two things together, this will be a critical year for us to see if we are a consistent football team … to see if we can just replace guys and keep on moving.”

Beamer has a list of priorities and the first thing on that list is getting a handle on the quarterback position. The Hokies’ returning starter Grant Noel had a solid hold on the quarterback duties when he suffered a torn ACL in his left knee just days before Tech’s 2002 spring game. Noel, who closed out his first season as a starter by passing for 269 yards against Florida State in the 2002 Gator Bowl, opted to forego surgery and has spent the past few months strengthening his knee and leg in preparation for the season. Noel was inconsistent at times during the 2001 season but showed leadership and toughness on the way to picking up valuable experience for his senior year.

If Noel is unable to play, sophomore Bryan Randall has worked hard to be ready. Randall had an outstanding spring, showing improved technique and poise. The Hokies will also take a look at freshman Marcus Vick when practice opens. Vick, whose older brother, Michael, was a Tech All-American and the first player picked in the 2001 NFL Draft, will be given the opportunity to show what he can do during the preseason.

Overall, the Hokies must replace 11 starters, including six on defense. The losses on the defensive side, however, go deeper than just the starters. The team’s top five defensive tackles were all seniors, as were the top three inside linebackers.

“Right up the middle of our defense is where all the new guys are,” Beamer says. “That’s where you would like to be a strong, veteran team and it’s just the opposite. We have plenty of talented guys, but most of them are inexperienced and there is no way around it. How quickly are they going to play well is the issue.”

The final solution to the tackle situation will not come until August. “We feel some of the people we have recruited fit into this situation, too,” the Tech coach admits.

Several incoming recruits could also figure into the equation at the wide receiver spots where Tech lost big-play man André Davis and tall, athletic Emmett Johnson.

“We have some good receivers in the program,” Beamer points out, “but right now, I think we need some people to step up and be productive.”

Among Tech’s strengths will be a deep, talented group of defensive ends, an experienced, athletic group of cornerbacks and free safeties and a stable of tailbacks that ranks among the best in the nation.

The Hokies will also have new quarterbacks coach Kevin Rogers on hand for the first season. After spending time with the quarterbacks currently in the system last spring, Rogers now has a better grasp of what he has to work with. While the spring session was a big one, Stinespring feels the fall preseason camp will be just as important. A couple of items remain areas of concern, such as the health of Noel, finalizing the depth chart at each position and determining which incoming freshmen can be ready for the opening game against Arkansas State.

“I thought our offense competed well in the spring,” Stinespring says. “We wanted to implement a more attacking style of offense and I think we accomplished that goal. We moved some guys around and I think that’s going to make a better offense in general. I think those moves have given us a chance to be a good offense. I think we helped ourselves talent-wise and we’re going to have to use the fall to try to get these guys ready.”

With the loss of 11 players to the NFL — five from the offense — there will be a lot of new faces on offense this year. Some will be seeing their first collegiate playing time and some will make their first starts.

“These young players have to step up and fill some voids, especially at the receiver spot,” Stinespring says. “We want to get the best 11 athletes on the field, and that meant moving some guys around. Now we have to get them ready to play.”

Offensive Line

Offensive coordinator/defensive line coach Bryan Stinespring has the luxury of three starters back on a line which helped spring several running backs to big games last year.

“It helps a lot having three starters back, but we still have a very young group.” Stinespring says. “I really like this group. It has a nice mixture of experience and young talent. We had some guys step up and secure starting spots and now we have to work on becoming a cohesive unit. The depth was the biggest concern heading into spring and I think we helped ourselves, but we still have some questions that need to be answered.”

Junior Jake Grove will make the move from guard to center this year. He started 10 games at right guard last season, as well as serving as the top backup to Steve DeMasi at center. Last season was the first Grove played through without his nagging back injury flaring up to the point where he had to miss playing time. He played 565 offensive plays a year ago, grading out at 84.9 percent on the year with a team-high 48 knockdown blocks.

“I think center is Jake’s best position,” Stinespring says. “Last year, we went with our best five linemen on the field, so we put Jake out there at guard. But I think he likes this position better and has a better feel of playing it.”

Robert Ramsey, who saw limited action last year, along with Danny McGrath, who entered school in January, are the other candidates for the back-up spot at center.

At guard, Stinespring has the luxury of working with two returning players. Luke Owens and James Miller are both healthy and will enter the fall as the No. 1s at the guard spots.

Owens came in to start the West Virginia game last season and never relinquished the spot. The 6-3, 312-pounder played in all 11 games, averaging 46.5 snaps per game. He graded out at 81 percent for the year with 37 knockdowns. He had off-season surgery on his elbow and will enter the fall as the No. 1 man at right guard.

“We need a healthy Luke Owens in the fall,” Stinespring says. “Luke brings a lot to the table. He’s a tough guy who brings a lot of experience to the line. We need to get him healthy and keep him healthy this season."

Another player in the mix is Miller, a true sophomore who saw plenty of action last year. He was the No. 2 man at right guard behind Grove and will enter the fall as the top man at left guard.

At 6-6, 310 pounds, Miller has good size, foot work and work ethic. He played 160 snaps last season, averaging nearly 18 plays per game.

“We put a lot on Jim this spring,” Stinespring says. “We’ve got a lot of size and quickness for his size. He’s been a tough player in the ‘middle of the line’ and has a lot of mental aspects of his game that we’ll be able to contribute this year.”

At right tackle, the No. 1 man heading into fall practice will be Jon Dunn. At 6-7, 324 pounds, the redshirt sophomore is the best lineman on the team. He has made nice progress in two seasons, but will be pushed hard to get ready for the fall. Last year, he averaged nearly 28 snaps per game and played a total of 231 offensive snaps. "At times, Jon is exactly what you’re looking for at a right tackle," Stinespring says. "He has outstanding size, but he needs to get a little bit stronger and more physical. But he has the chance to be an outstanding tackle.”

Jacob Gibson started the first four games of the season at left guard and played in nine contests, but missed the Gator Bowl due to a back injury. At 6-4, 288, the redshirt junior has good size and quickness. He played a total of 286 offensive snaps last season and registered 17 knockdown blocks.

"Jacob’s really like a utility infielder for us," Stinespring says. "He can play a lot of positions and is really the top backup at both tackle spots. But he could also move and play at guard if we need him too.”

Redshirt freshman Curtis Bradley, who earned a reputation as a tough player in the “middle drills” at practice, will also compete for playing time at this position.

“Our offensive line should be improved over last year, but I think some of the things that concerned me last year concern me again this year,” Stinespring says. "We have to stay healthy and we have to play at a high level.

“A lot of pressure is being exerted on our quarterback with his health so I feel we need to be able to help him any way we can. We’re in a position to do that, but we need to go out and produce on the field.

“We have the opportunity to be a better offensive line than we were last year and I certainly hope we will be better than last year.”

Tight Ends
The Hokies will have to adjust quickly to the loss of the duo of Bob Sowikowski and Browning Wynn at the tight end position. The two have been a constant in the lineup the past three seasons and combined to catch 33 passes in that time — most of which went for first downs. Tight ends coach Danny Pearman knows what he lost, but he’s also excited about the four men he has in the program.

“Losing the experience Browning and Bob brought is big,” Pearman says. "But they were also good people, good leaders and solid citizens. Both of them had good careers here. That’s part of the excitement of college football. Players leave and the others guys have to step up.”

Tech has four tight ends in its program right now, all with limited or no game experience. All bring excellent size and good hands to the position and Pearman knows it will be a battle between them.

Redshirt junior Keith Willis has the most experience at the position. He caught two passes last season, one of which was a touchdown.

"I’m looking forward to seeing what Keith matures into," Pearman says. "He’s been here the longest and has played the most at the position. I’m not sure he’s played enough to say he has an edge, but he has played more than the rest of them and probably knows the offensive schemes more so than the rest of them.”

Redshirt sophomore Jared Mazzetta was a standout on the punt and kickoff coverage teams but has seen only limited action on offense. He had nine tackles on special teams and brings a physical presence to the position. He will enter the fall as a co-No. 1 with Willis.

Also battling for the starting spot will be redshirt freshman Jeff King. The Pulaski native is the biggest of the three at 6-5, 258 pounds and has excellent hands. Pearman says King could have played last year if needed, but Tech had the luxury of redshirting him.

Greg Burnop is a walk-on from Blacksburg who has added weight to try and be a factor at the position. He was slowed by a sprained MCL in his knee during the spring but is looking to work his way into the mix.

“I have to develop a guy we’re comfortable with not only at the beginning of the year, but at the end in the thick of the conference,” Pearman says. “We have to develop a kid who can get us the edge on the corner, be a stout blocker, but also be a good receiver.”

Quarterbacks
New quarterbacks coach Kevin Rogers started the spring session with four healthy quarterbacks to work with. By the spring game, he was down to one.

Chris Clifton was moved to wide receiver and Will Hunt suffered a sprained shoulder early in the session. But the big blow came when returning starter Grant Noel tore his left ACL and was lost for the spring. That left Bryan Randall to direct both teams in the spring game.

While Suggs will likely be the starter for Arkansas State, both will play a lot and each week's starter will be determined by who's the hotter back at that time.

“Right now, both will play a lot and we'll decide week-to-week who's going to start,” Hite says. “For me, it’s not who starts the game, but who’s in at the end. It’s created a great situation where they push each other and make each other better.”

John Candelas, a walk-on from Blacksburg, will provide depth at the tailback position and is working hard to work his way into the rotation.

“I’m really pleased with the way John came along during the spring,” Hite says. “He has good speed and will probably help us out on special teams.”

Candelas will battle with incoming freshman Mike Imoh for the No. 3 spot. Imoh was the Virginia AAA State Player of the Year and will see action if he isn’t redshirted.

If Hite has any work to do, it is at the fullback position. Gone is four-year starter Jarrett Ferguson, who was a blocking force and a receiving threat for the Hokies.

“Jarrett is definitely one of the most special football players I’ve had the pleasure of working with in my 24 years at Virginia Tech and I’m going to miss him,” Hite says. “He brought so much to the table and I hate like heck to think I’m going into this season without him. But we have some good young players who I think will be able to fill in nicely for Jarrett.”

Leading the way at the position is redshirt junior Doug Easlick, who served as the No. 2 man last season. He is a strong blocker who has excellent hands. He caught four passes for 54 yards and a score last year.

“Doug had a good spring,” Hite says. “He did an outstanding job in the weight room this past off-season.
Doug is basically a tailback with tailback skills playing at the fullback position. He's strong and tough and there's no reason he can't be an outstanding football player for us."

Cedric Humes spent the 2001 season terrorizing the defense as a member of the scout team. He spent the spring as a tailback, but was moved to fullback following the spring. He has excellent size and speed and should be a factor at his new position.

"Even though they weren't running our plays, you could see what he was capable of," Hite says. "[Defensive coordinator] Coach [Bud] Foster and his staff would come in after practice each week saying great things about him. Cedric is a great talent who runs and catches well. He has great speed, but he's not as physical as the other two, but that will come."

Pushing him for time will be the oft-moved Josh Spence. Spence came in as a tailback and moved to linebacker last year, but seems to have found a home at fullback. He is a big, strong back who could be a great fullback for the Hokies.

"Josh has accepted the transition to fullback," Hite says. "He also has tailback skills and he's pretty good with the ball in his arms. It's a new position for him, so he has some things to learn. It's been a slow process for him, but he's coming along. He has all the tools — speed, size and strength — to be an outstanding fullback for us."

It's become an annual tradition for Hite to claim each year's class as "the best group of Stallions I've ever had" and this year will be no different.

"At tailback, obviously this is the best group yet," Hite says. "The fullbacks still have some work to do, but it could become a great class. It all depends on the three fullbacks and how they come along. But if they do, and I think they can, I believe we could have a chance to have the best backfield ever at Virginia Tech."

Wide Receivers

The Hokies must replace all-everything wide receiver André Davis and steady Emmett Johnson, but the cupboard isn't totally bare for receivers coach Tony Ball heading into the fall. "André and Emmett were good athletes with tremendous speed and we don't have that at the position so we can't replace them right now," Ball says. "We are different at the position. We have to start all over and find our niche as a group."

Ball says the goal for this group is simple. He feels they must concentrate on the details of the position.

"We've got some older guys with some experience, but we have a lot of work to do. You can put all of these guys in a pot and they're almost the same," Ball says. "They all are about the same size with about the same experience. We have to bring them along quickly and while we're doing that, we need to learn to be good team players and fundamentally sound wide receivers."

Leading the troops will be Shawn Witten, who missed the second half of the season with a broken leg. He will enter the fall as the co-No. 1 man at the flanker position.

The rising senior has perhaps the best hands on the team and rarely drops a ball. Before suffering the injury in the Pittsburgh game, Witten had 16 catches for 161 yards and a touchdown."

"He's going to have to be a leader for us," Ball says. "He's a leader in his own way because he's quiet, but the guys respect him. He's got to work on getting off the line of scrimmage and creating space in his route running."

This season will be a big one for Ernest Wilford. The redshirt junior has the size at 6-4 to be an outstanding receiver and must develop some consistency in his game. Last season, he caught eight passes for 100 yards and a TD. He will head into the fall as the No. 1 man at split end.

Two players who were playing other positions last season will battle for playing time at receiver this fall. Chris Clifton and Justin Hamilton make the move from the backfield to the wide receiver position.

Clifton started the spring at quarterback, but quickly made the move to split end. He has good size at 6-4 and speed, but needs to learn the position. He played there on the scout team last fall, but did not move to the position full-time until the spring. He will enter the fall battling for playing time at split end.

Hamilton spent last season as a scout team running back. He was moved to the wide out in early spring and made great strides every day. He brings size (6-3, 217) and athleticism to the position and will enter the fall as the co-No. 1 at the flanker position.

"Justin showed a lot of ability, but he still has a way to go," Ball says. "Things were pretty vanilla to him for the spring game, but he studies and he wants to be good. I think his future is bright, but people need to be patient because he's never played that position."

Redshirt sophomore Richard Johnson, walk-on Chris Shreve and redshirt senior Terrell Parham are all working to find their way into the rotation.

"This group worked extremely hard this summer," Ball says. "I'm being realistic with this group. This is a good group that I enjoy being around. They work hard and want to get the job done. It's a young group with some great athletes. My job is to turn them into a great group of receivers."

Parham has the most experience of the three, seeing action the past three seasons. He is a good possession receiver who caught 14 passes for 155 yards and a touchdown last season.

Johnson is a player who can go the distance at any time. He has blazing speed and good hands, but has been hampered by injuries. He returned kickoffs for the Hokies last season, averaging 22.2 yards per return. He also caught four passes for 34 yards in a season ago. If he stays healthy, he could be a big threat for the Hokies this year.

Shreve, who joined the team last season, is perhaps the hardest-working receiver in the bunch, often staying after practice to work on technique or route running. He had one catch for 13 yards a season ago, but played a lot on special teams before an ankle injury slowed him.

Ball is also excited about the arrival of Fred Lee, who enrolled at Tech for both summer sessions. Lee originally signed with the Hokies prior to last season, but had to go to prep school. He reaffirmed his commitment and is finally a Hokie.

"I'm going to throw him right in there," Ball says. "I'm going to feed him and see how much he can absorb. When he hits the wall, we'll see why he did and try to simplify it. The one advantage he has is he is a true receiver. He is the one guy in the receiving corps who played receiver in high school, so I think he'll be right in the mix."

Lee is a speedster who, although doesn't have great size, does run good routes and has good hands. He could be a big threat for the Hokies at the split end position because of his good speed and quickness, but could end up at flanker if needed.

2002 Defense

This shapes up to be one of Coach Bud Foster’s most challenging seasons as defensive coordinator. Gone from last year’s highly-ranked defense are all five tackles who lettered, along with the top three inside linebackers and two starting members of the secondary.

The key losses include starting tackles Chad Beasley and David Pugh, who anchored the defensive line the past three seasons, and linebacker Ben Taylor, the Hokies’ leading tackler in 2000 and 2001. The Hokies will also miss Mike line backers Jake Housenight and Brian Welch, rover Kevin McCadam and corner back Larry Austin.

“I think we have some athletic ability at the positions where we need people to step up,” says Foster. “The thing that we just don’t have is the experience. Fifteen days of spring practice isn’t going to give you the experience you need.

“As a group, though, I was pleased with how we progressed through spring practice. Are we where we want to be? No … but our goal was to improve every day and I thought we did that. The big thing was getting some of the younger players in our defensive tackle and linebacker spots to understand their position and their position expectations along with the defense’s expectations.”

The defense will certainly have its share of strong points, too. There is plenty of talent and outstanding depth at both end positions, where senior Lamar Cobb and juniors Jim Davis, Cols Colas and Nathaniel Adibi all saw starting time last season. There is also experience and excellent ability at cornerback and free safety where returning starters Ronyell Whitaker and Willie Pile will be expected to play leadership roles.

With only six seniors on the defensive depth chart, Foster is looking for leaders. “We would like everybody to be a leader through their work ethic,” he says. “But I’m hoping there will be some natural leaders who will rise to the occasion. With such a small senior class, sometimes those leaders may not be seniors.”

Foster’s first order of business when practice resumes will be making sure the Hokies’ interior line and linebacker play is going to be solidified. The biggest part of that will be making sure some depth is created, especially at the tackle positions.

“The fall will be a learning experience for some of these guys,” says Foster, “but they have athletic ability, they want to be good football players and they want to carry on the tradition that we’ve developed defensively.

“We have high expectations here, and that is something that is not going to change,” he adds. “Because of the mixture of experience and youth on this defense, we need to grow and develop as a unit. If this group is willing to make the commitment and work together to be successful, I like our chances.”

Defensive Line

Tech defensive line coach Charley Wiles finds himself heading into preseason practice with mixed emotions … and for good reason.

Wiles welcomes back five lettermen at defensive end, including four who have seen extensive playing time and starting duty. At the same time, he will begin the season with just two players who have seen any action on the collegiate level at the defensive tackle positions. The Hokies’ top five defensive tackles in 2001 were all seniors.

“The ends are the strength of our defense,” Wiles says. “They continued to improve during spring practice. I am excited about the possibilities we have at those positions.

“Obviously, losing the kids and the depth that we did at defensive tackle, has made those positions a priority,” he adds. “We did improve during the spring, but we have got to get better faster.”

The returners at end include redshirt junior Nathaniel Adibi, who has played in 24 games, 21 as a starter; senior Lamar Cobb, who has played in 28 games, 20 as a starter; redshirt junior Cols Colas, who has played in 22 games, four as a starter; and junior Jim Davis, who has played in 21 games, three as a starter. Last season, those four players combined for 49 quarterback hurries, 25 tackles for loss and 11 of the Hokies’ 30 sacks. Redshirt sophomore Jason Lallis also returns, but will likely be tried at tackle.

Wiles moved Adibi to the stud end position during the spring in an effort to get him and Davis on the field at the same time. At 6-3, 251 pounds, Adibi at the stud position. The former high school running back has shown steady improvement as a defensive player. His explosive speed and power – 4.41 forty and 390 bench press – make him tough to handle on the corner. Cobb started the Hokies’ last four games last fall and led the team in quarterback hurries with 17. He contributed 37 tackles, 3.5 sacks and 10 total tackles for loss. Walk-on Bob Ruff, a rising sophomore, is also slated to work at the stud end position.

“I thought Nathaniel and Cols both played well in the spring,” Wiles says. “Nathaniel has gotten bigger and stronger and he’s much more physical now than he was. Cobb is so much improved from when he first got here. He plays with speed and has shown he can make plays. It will be a week-to-week battle with those two.”

Davis has been among the team’s leaders in sacks each of his first two seasons. He finished third as a freshman in 2000 with 3.5 sacks and was tied for the team lead with 4.5 last fall. At 6-3, 251 pounds, Davis has proven he has all the skills to be outstanding. He finished the 2001 season with 38 tackles, including eight behind the line. He was named one of the Hokies’ most valuable defensive performers during the spring. Cobb (6-1, 223) contributed 46 total tackles in ’01, including two sacks. He brings outstanding experience and good athleticism to the position.

One of the coaching staff’s best moves during the fall was the decision to redshirt tackle Kevin Lewis (6-1, 281). Lewis saw action during eight games as a true freshman in 2000 and showed an outstanding ability to make plays. With five senior tackles on the 2001 roster, the Tech staff decided the best way to fully utilize Lewis’ talents would be to hold him out a year and let him return with the opportunity to be a three-year starter. The Brandon Frye (6-4, 257) and Andrew Fleck (6-3, 258) both have the size and versatility to play several positions. Frye got his first work at end, while Fleck started out at tackle. "It's still wide open," Wiles says about the tackle spots. "I like our talent level, we're just inexperienced. Right now, I would say we are adequate. Around here, we are not used to adequate. We are not going to be satisfied with that."

Linebackers

Three key seniors — Ben Taylor, Jake Houseright and Brian Welch — are gone from the linebacker corps, leaving big shoes to fill at both the mike and backer positions. Questions also surround the depth at whip linebacker, where four-game starters Deon Provitt and T.J. Jackson are gone.

Taylor led the Hokies in tackles each of the last two seasons from the backer position, earning All-America honors both seasons. Houseright and Welch handled almost all of the snaps at mike linebacker during that same span. Coach Bud Foster begins preseason practice with a nucleus of four players who have had limited experience at the inside linebacker positions — redshirt juniors Vegas Robinson and Chris Buie, redshirt sophomore Mikal Baaqee and senior Alex Markogiannakis. Another promising young player with time in the system, redshirt sophomore Chad Cooper, sat out spring semester while recovering from Guillain-Barré syndrome, a serious disorder of the nervous system. "After that group, we've got redshirt freshmen, some of whom were highly-recruited kids and are talented players," Foster says. "Now it's time for them to get a better understanding of their position and the expectations that go with it. As a linebacker, they have to learn the entire defense because they are involved in the run aspect and the coverage aspect. So far, I've been pleased with the their work ethic."

Robinson and Baaqee, who Foster labels a pair of athletic play-makers, emerged from spring practice as the leaders at the tackles and backer positions, respectively.

Robinson, who was the No. 2 man behind Taylor at backer last season, played outstanding football during the spring. He is a physical player with both speed and strength. A two-year letterman, he saw action on defense in eight games last season and was a regular on special teams. He finished the season with 18 tackles.

"I think Vegas is ready and excited about the opportunity to step up and be the starting backer," Foster says. "He has a chance to continue the tradition we've established at that position. He possesses all the tools you're looking for."

for to be a play-maker against the run and the pass. He’s seen how the guys before him have worked and understands the defense. I think he’s got a big future.”

Baaqee practiced at backer during the fall, then moved to Mike linebacker for spring practice. His only game experience to date has been on special teams, but Foster is confident in his ability.

“Mikal is an extremely active player who brings outstanding quickness and athleticism to the mike position,” Foster says. “He is a guy who is good in the running game and good in coverage. He lacks experience, but I think he has a lot of promise.”

Joining Baaqee at Mike linebacker will be Markogiannakis, Buie, redshirt freshman Jordan Trott and Cooper. Transfer Steve Canter and walk-on J.D. Zeigler could also work at the position.

Markogiannakis has a nose for the football and the only game experience at the mike position among the returning players. Buie possesses the physical ability to be successful but must show more consistent play. Trott is a big, rangy, athletic player with a lot of promise.

Cooper is expected to move to the mike spot after spending his first two seasons at the backer position. The move will help bring more speed and athleticism to the mike spot.

Robinson’s competition at the backer position will come from a pair of inexperienced, but talented, young players. Redshirt freshmen Blake Warren and James Anderson both got a lot of work at backer during the Hokies’ 15 spring workouts.

Warren, a safety in high school, has made steady progress in his transition to linebacker. He brings football savvy and toughness to the position and has shown the ability to see things developing from the linebacker position. He impressed the coaches with his aggressive play during the spring when he was named the Hokies’ top defensive newcomer.

Anderson has already added 15 pounds of muscle to his frame. He also has good speed and athletic ability. Foster wants him to become a little more physical at the point of attack and fully expects that to happen as he gets more time at the position.

“I’ve got a big job ahead of me getting all these young guys ready,” Foster says. “The good thing is they got a lot of reps during the spring. The bottom line is finding who can best help us beat Miami, beat Syracuse, beat Boston College, beat Pittsburgh … that’s what I’ve got to determine.”

Last season, three players saw starting time at the whip position. Deon Provitt earned the starting job and was beginning to excel at the position when he suffered a torn ACL in his left knee against UCF. T.J. Jackson took over the starting duties for four games before freshman Mike Daniels won the job for the final three regular season games and the Gator Bowl.

With Provitt and Jackson gone, whip linebackers coach Jim Cavanaugh’s attention will be focused on Daniels and redshirt sophomore Brandon Manning, who joined the team as an invited walk-on in 2000. Cavanaugh might also pick up some help from the Hokies’ incoming recruiting class.

Daniels moved from free safety to whip following Provitt’s injury and made a rapid adjustment. He moved into the starting lineup at Temple and gave the Hokies solid play.

“I thought Mike did a great job adjusting,” says Cavanaugh. “He’s got a pretty good feel for things out there. He’s always around the ball. He’ll run and he’ll hit you.”

Manning excelled as a special teams player last fall and found things falling into place for him at linebacker during the spring when he earned a scholarship. His work ethic and toughness will be positives as he works to earn more playing time at the position.

Brandon had a solid spring,” Cavanaugh says. “He has a chance to help us … he has shown potential.”

Another player who could work some at the position is redshirt freshman walk-on Tommy Morgan.

Defensive Secondary

With the return of starting free safety Willie Pile, his top backup and four experienced cornerbacks led by All-American Ronyell Whitaker, the Hokies should be extremely solid in the secondary. The only real question – finding a replacement for starter Kevin McCadam – was answered in the spring with the emergence of senior Billy Hardee.

McCadam’s departure following an outstanding senior season left some big shoes to fill. The Lakeside, Calif., product started all 12 games in 2001 and finished third on the team in tackles with 83. He also contributed eight tackles for loss, six passes broken up, three interceptions, two sacks and two fumble recoveries. He scored touchdowns on a 69-yard interception return and a 9-yard fumble return.

Hardee, returning from a knee injury that sidelined him for much of the fall, performed well during spring practice and was named the team’s top defensive hustler. His size and aggressive style of play are well suited for the rover position. Hardee has also seen playing time at cornerback and free safety during his Tech career.

“I was pleasantly surprised with Billy,” says Jim Cavanaugh, who coaches the Hokies’ strong safeties and outside linebackers. “He was solid and consistent during the spring. He’s a good football player. He works hard, he’s tough and he has a knack for being around the football.”

Joining Hardee at the rover position are redshirt junior Michael Crawford and redshirt sophomore Sam Fatherly, who both showed progress during spring practice. The preseason will be important for Crawford and Fatherly. Both players possess ability, but neither has developed consistency in their play to date. Crawford showed signs of more consistent play while pressuring Hardee for the top spot early in the spring but ended up missing some valuable time with an ankle injury. He worked a total of 40 plays at rover during Tech’s first six games in 2001 and finished the season with 14 tackles, including one quarterback sack. Fatherly’s only varsity action last season came on special teams against UCF and West Virginia. He also played on the jayvee and scout teams.

There are a number of players returning who have been successful at the other three secondary positions, including senior starters Pile and Whitaker.

Pile, who has started 24 consecutive games at free safety, missed most of Tech’s contact work during the spring due to a shoulder injury. He spent the time helping with the Hokies’ younger players and will return to contact work when practice resumes. Pile was second on the team in tackles last season with 94. He topped the team in interceptions for the second straight year with a total of four. “Willie does a lot of good things and has made a lot of plays for us, but we’re looking for him to make more,” secondary coach Lorenzo Ward says. “Unfortunately, he was injured in the spring, but I think he will come back in good shape and be ready to play. We want him to become more dominating in his open-field tackling.”

Pile’s top backup during the fall, Vincent Fuller, also returns. A redshirt sophomore, Fuller possesses a little more speed and quickness than Pile, but is still developing strength-wise. He collected 12 tackles and broke up a pair of passes while playing in 10 of Tech’s 11 regular-season games. Fuller has done a good job of picking up the Tech system and could push Pile this fall. Freshman walk-on Jackson Dismukes will also work at the position.

At cornerback, Whitaker moved from boundary corner to field corner when spring practice opened. The senior performer earned first-team All-Big East and third-team AP All-America honors in 2001. He finished the season with 53 tackles, an interception and a team-leading 10 passes broken up. He also returned a blocked field goal 71 yards for a touchdown. Whitaker started several games at field corner during the 2000 season when starter Larry Austin was sidelined.

“When Ronyell is concentrating on his technique, there’s none better,” says Ward. “He played really well last season when he concentrated. During the spring we harped on him about concentrating on technique 100 percent of the time.” Also competing at the field corner spot will be junior Eric Green, who has earned some starting time in each of his first two collegiate seasons, and freshman D.J. Walton, who was redshirted last season. Green has shown steady improvement at the position and will head into preseason practice as a co-starter on the depth chart following a strong showing in the spring. He has been concentrating his efforts on becoming a more physical player. Green contributed 18 total tackles in 2001 and blocked two punts. Walton is a smart player who showed a lot of improvement during his first year. He is expected to continue that improvement as he gets more attention in the fall.

Sophomore DeAngelo Hall and redshirt junior Garnell Wilds will hold down the boundary cornerback position. Both players saw action in every game last season and each got one start — Hall on the boundary side and Wilds at field corner.

Hall moved into the starting job with an outstanding spring that saw him named one of the team’s most valuable defensive players. He has tremendous physical skills and is beginning to understand the defense more and more. He registered 42 tackles and three interceptions last season to earn fourth-team Freshman All-America honors from The Sporting News.

“DeAngelo Hall had a great spring,” Ward says. “He had great practices every day. He just needs to pick up where he left off and he’ll have an outstanding fall.”

Wilds improved more than anyone in the secondary in 2001. He doesn’t have the speed that some of the Hokies’ other corners possess, but he works the hardest on the little things it takes to be successful. He posted 27 tackles, four passes broken up and two interceptions last fall.

“I thought we had a good spring,” Ward says. “We improved in the areas where a lot of these young men needed to improve. With six experienced players who can play returning, I feel very good about these positions.”

The Hokies have a reputation for outstanding special teams play, but head coach Frank Beamer wasn’t completely satisfied with Tech’s efforts in the kicking game during the 2001 season.

“I don’t think we kicked the football as well as it takes to win championships,” Beamer says. “We also had a punt returned for a touchdown against us and two punts blocked. That means our punt coverage and punt protection teams also need attention.”

With most of the same performers returning from last season, Beamer will be looking for improved consistency this year. Junior Carter Warley didn’t see any competition for the place-kicking duties during the spring with senior Jon Mollerup nursing a sore knee. Things should heat up this fall, however, when Mollerup returns and highly-regarded freshman Nick Schmitt joins the squad.

Warley struggled during the 2001 season but still managed to lead the team in scoring with 77 points. He connected on all 44 of his extra point kicks, but saw his field goal accuracy drop. He connected on just 11 of 21 field goals last season after making seven of his nine tries in 2000. Warley is hoping to carry over his success from the spring when he made his first seven field goals during scrimmages.

Redshirt sophomore Vinnie Burns returns as the starting punter, but he can count on renewed competition from redshirt junior Bobby Peasley, who held the starting job in 2000. Burns finished his first season with a 37.8-yard average on 59 punts. He has the leg and the ability to be an all-star punter. All he needs is consistency.

Along with his work as a punter, Peasley will also continue as Tech’s holder for placekicks. Senior receiver Shawn Witten will serve as his backup.

Both snappers from last season return and several new faces will join the competition. Ken Keister and Travis Conway split the snapping duties for most of the 2001 season, with Keister snapping for field goals and PATs and Conway snapping for punts. Keister took over both duties late in the year. Another player who will see some work at the positions during the preseason is freshman Nick Leeson.

Kickoff return man Richard Johnson is back, but the Hokies must replace record-setting punter Andre Davis. Cornerback Ronyell Whitaker, who finished 16th nationally in punt returns while subbing for an injured Davis during the 2000 season, will be available. The most likely starter, however, is Whitaker’s running mate at corner, sophomore DeAngelo Hall. Johnson, who averaged 22.2 yards on kickoff returns for the team, set a Tech bowl record for kickoff return yards with 118 in the Gator Bowl. Hall is a phenomenal athlete who excelled as a return man in high school.

Tech will miss the play of special teams demon Wayne Ward, who blocked punts, broke wedges and leveled would-be tacklers during his four seasons with the Hokies. Two of the top returning players to watch will be junior Eric Green and redshirt sophomore Brandon Manning. Green has blocked three punts over the past two seasons, including two last season. Manning blocked one punt last season and returned one of Green’s blocks for a touchdown against No. 1-ranked Miami. Tech finished the 2001 season with seven blocked kicks and three special teams touchdowns.
Following are the preseason number assignments for 2002. Changes are expected to occur before the season opens. This roster should not be used in game programs for the 2002 season. An updated roster will be available from the SID office prior to the season.
